PropertyMaps.com Partners With eppraisal.com to Offer Visitors Free Home Value Data

The free Web site PropertyMaps.com makes it even easier for home shoppers to search for property.

Sarasota, Fla. / Jan. 6, 2007 – PropertyMaps.com, the leader in online real estate search, begins offering instant access to home value data free of charge starting today, the company announced.

PropertyMaps.com partnered with Orlando, Fla.-based eppraisal.com to enable home shoppers to easily obtain the home value data in real time without having to click-away from its Web site.

eppraisal.com pulls together public record data from over 120 million homes to quickly and easily give users an estimated value range.

“This is a perfect fit for us,” says Keith Hanenian, CEO of PropertyMaps.com. “The additional property data offers our visitors another information tool when searching for a home.”

PropertyMaps.com is a user-friendly Web site that allows consumers to quickly search and view millions of listings nationwide using popular mapping tools such as Google Maps, Google Earth, and Microsoft Virtual Earth.

It’s also the first Web site to provide consumers free map-based access to the Multiple Listing Service (MLS) databases used by Realtors® nationwide. PropertyMaps.com even offers a tool to find sexual offenders living in a neighborhood.

“With PropertyMaps.com, searching for a home online no longer means visiting a dozen Web sites,” says Hanenian. “We’re bringing all the tools together.”

For Damian Scott, president of eppraisal.com, PropertyMaps.com offers the perfect partnering opportunity.

“We want to provide consumers easy access to this data,” says Scott, “and PropertyMaps.com is a really strong company with a really strong interface.”

Consumers are able to access the home value data no strings attached—there’s no requirement to input any contact or other personal information to access search tool.
